The numbers are staggering:

1 in 5 physicians will retire in the next two years.

$250,000

The cost of hiring a single specialist can exceed.

14% are leaving the profession altogether

If you're tired of seeing your physicians go, and facing the costly treadmill of recruiting as a result, it's time to employ the value of telemedicine. Here are five ways a vibrant telemedicine program can stop your physicians from leaving.

1. Reduce Physician Burnout

Telemedicine can mitigate burnout by sharing the load – often during peak hours or when staffing gaps occur. This will reduce the physical and emotional exhaustion associated with being overloaded and on call.

2. Improve Access to Specialist Care:

Telemedicine provides patients and hospitalists with access to specialist consultations without the need for on-staff specialists. This not only improves patient outcomes but facilitates a multidisciplinary approach to patient care.

3. Enhance Job Satisfaction

Telemedicine minimizes inefficiencies, enabling physicians to allocate more time to patient interaction, continuing education, and personal development, all of which contribute to higher job satisfaction and retention.

4. Support Continuous Professional Development and Collaboration

Telemedicine not only facilitates more direct patient care but also supports continuous professional development and collaboration among physicians, enabling physicians to stay updated on the latest medical advancements and treatment protocols.

5. Cut Costs for Greater Hospital Sustainability:

Telemedicine helps to eliminate the cost and time involved in recruiting new physicians. This ultimately results in a more sustainable and profitable hospital that physicians are proud to be a part of.
